

THE FUTURE OF (REMOTE?) WORK IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE

3 JUNE 2021, 13H-14H (CEST)

The Coronavirus (Covid-19) pandemic has transformed the work and workplaces of the public sector. It has offered an unprecedented opportunity to experiment with new ways of working, to find a new balance of remote and in office presence in the years to come.

Today, with vaccine strategies in many OECD countries beginning to provide new optimism for an imminent return to the office, the time is right to set a blueprint not just for returning to the office as it was before, but as it will be for years into the future.

Register now and join the online discussions where public service leaders will share their insights in answering the three big questions:

- ❑ What has been learned about remote working in this last year?
- ❑ How do public servants expect to be working in the future?
- ❑ What kind of policies can be implemented today to bridge the gap?

REGISTER NOW

MODERATOR

○ Mr. Simon Kuper

Columnist, Financial Times

OPENING REMARKS

○ Ms. Elsa Pilichowski

Director of Public Governance, OECD

PANELLISTS

○ Ms. Maria de Fátima Fonseca

Secretary of State for Innovation and Administrative Modernization, Portugal

○ Ms. Nathalie Green

Assistant Director for HR Policy Development, Directorate for Administration and the Public Service, France.

○ Mr. Dustin Brown

Deputy Assistant Director for Management, Office of Management and Budget, United States, and Chair of the OECD Public Governance Committee

○ Mr. Simon Claydon

Director of People, Capability and Change, Ministry of Housing, Communities, and Local Government, United Kingdom, and Chair of the OECD Public Employment and Management working party.