

Call for papers for a scientific journal:

Tourism - management, administration, law, No. 1 / 2023

Topic of the issue: Managing change in tourism - analysis of the current state and prospects for the future in regions and tourist enterprises

Thematic editor of the issue: Dr. Dominik Borek, PhD, LL.M.

Publication language: Polish, English

Deadline for submitting articles: May 20, 2023.

Introduction

Tourism is the area of economic life that is clearly affected by all kinds of changes caused by the economic, political, legal or social situation.

The department of government administration, tourism, covers matters related to the development of the country's tourism and mechanisms for regulating the tourism market. Taking into account the scale of impact of the changes on regions and tourist enterprises, it should be objectively recognized that this is one of the basic areas in which this phenomenon is regulated. As part of the first issue of the journal Tourism - management, administration, law, we would like to know the current state of research in this area. Changes taking place in the market of tourist services affect employment, tourist offer, but also business models. The ways of dealing with the change are interesting from the point of view of the market regulator, which is the minister responsible for tourism. At the same time, we would like to know the positions of people scientifically involved in this area.

As part of the first issue of the scientific journal, we want to present information on the change that can take place on many levels, which is why scientific texts on changes in legal regulations, changes in business concepts or the geopolitical situation, which will affect tourism, are welcome.

Changes in tourism from the perspective of the ongoing war in the east should also be properly considered and presented. The factors associated with the change prove that many important questions arise regarding tourism research in both economic and political (administrative) dimensions.

Making the right diagnosis in the context of changes that are present on the market of tourist services and affect it is currently one of the main challenges for the tourism sector, which is recovering after the pandemic. Thus, I would like to invite you to submit proposals for scientific articles addressing the issues of research on change management in tourism.

Suggested topics:

- legislative changes and their impact on tourism,
- change in the area of tourist services as a factor influencing the market,
- change management in the hotel industry,
- legal and factual aspects of employment in managing change in public administration in the area of tourism,
- impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and the war in Ukraine on the market of tourist services,
- changes in the perception of tourist regions in the face of pandemic and war crises.

Guidelines for authors:

When preparing articles, please follow the "Editorial Standards".

Any questions regarding substantive issues should be sent to the following address: dominik.borek@msit.gov.pl, and questions regarding editorial matters to the chairwoman of the Editorial Board - Ms. dr hab. Katarzyna Podhorodecka: redakcja@msit.gov.pl

We cordially invite you to cooperation

Dr Dominik Borek, PhD, LL.M.

ORCID: 0000-0002-4359-9426

editor of the issue